Businesses across America are in a quandary over the rapid changes affecting disability rights, products and services.

Business and politics are local, and many know that the pendulum can swing both ways and will eventually.

Access Ready Strategic - Stand By Me On-Call Consulting Program

The topic of accessibility, products and services for customers and employees with disabilities is vast, covering an entire range of concerns that affect many in different ways.

The rapid changes currently reshaping disability rights, products and services cannot be ignored, but neither can the very real needs of your employees and customers with disabilities.

Compassion and reality requires us to find reasonable solutions together.

As a business, government, or nonprofit leader, where do you start? Investigating and covering all bases at once would be costly and time-consuming.

"The current changes in policy do not change the needs of people with disabilities in local communities.

Disabled people and their families recognize those who care and those who do not.

Yes this may be a little rough, but it is reality.

Another reality check is the three hundred billion dollars a year in disposable income disabled people and their families spend annually.

Taking visible steps to find reasonable and cost-effective solutions to the issues raised by employees and customers with disabilities can go a long way toward establishing a business as a caring touchstone in the community."

Stated Douglas George Towne Chair-CEO of Access Ready.

Why Choose the Stand By Me Program?

Respond to Accessibility Issues as They Arise

Rather than spending money to investigate potential issues, demonstrate your serious commitment to disabled people in your community by making a public statement through the engagement of Access Ready Strategics' "Stand By Me" Education Briefings and On Call Consulting programs by investing just a few dollars a month.

It costs less than you may think.

Access Ready Strategic Social Purpose Corporation is an independent, cross-disability education and advocacy organization promoting a policy of civil rights, and equality for all. It advocates for digital inclusion and accessibility across information and communications technology (ICT).

The business, government and nonprofit sectors at all levels are becoming increasingly dependent on information and communications technology to provide goods and services. For people with disabilities, accessible information and communications technology is a necessity, not a luxury or a convenience, which fosters independence, economic self-sufficiency, and active, meaningful participation in civic life.
